Biographical note

Lillian D. Wald was born on March 10, 1867, in Cincinnati, Ohio, to German immigrants Max D. Wald, a dealer in optical wares and Minnie Schwarz. The Wald family moved to Rochester, New York where Wald received a private education at Miss Cruttenden's "English-French Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies and Little Girls." At the age of sixteen, she applied to Vassar College but was rejected because of her youth. Growing tired of social life in Rochester, Wald looked to nursing as a profession in which she might be afforded the opportunity for serious work as well as an outlet for her talents and ambition.

In 1889, Wald entered the New York Hospital School of Nursing. One year after her graduation, she enrolled at the Women's Medical College where she was asked to teach home nursing on New York City's Lower East Side. The lack of public health care for the growing immigrant population of the neighborhood, prompted Wald and fellow student, Mary Brewster, to abandon medical studies and work full-time in the service of New York's poorest citizens. Wald officially left medical school in 1893 and organized nursing classes for immigrant families on the Lower East Side at a tenement house on Jefferson Street. This home nursing program was the origin of the Henry Street Settlement.

By 1895, Wald had successfully raised enough philanthropic interest in her project to establish a "Nurse's Settlement" in a house at 265 Henry Street. Early benefactors of her work included Mrs. Solomon Loeb and her son-in-law Jacob H. Schiff, as well as Rita Wallach Morganthau, and Irene and Alice Lewisohn among others. As financial support grew, so did the Henry Street Settlement. The 11 resident workers before 1900 expanded to 92 nurses by 1913. At the time of Wald's death there were nearly 300 nurses working from some twenty branches throughout the city.

Wald was also an innovator in the field of public health care. As the Henry Street Nurses' Service gained national attention, it became the model for similar programs in cities throughout the United States. Public health nursing emerged as a profession as a direct result of Wald's work and ideas. In 1902, she arranged to have a Henry Street nurse provide full-time care to children in public schools. This program led the New York City Board of Health to organize the first public school nursing system in the world. In 1909, she worked to convince the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company to provide nursing service to its industrial policyholders. She was also instrumental in the creation of the department of nursing and health at Teachers College of Columbia University. The American Red Cross undertook rural public health nursing in 1912 at her instigation. Wald's appointment as the first president of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing in 1912 positioned her as a respected leader in American public health.

The Henry Street Settlement's mission gradually expanded beyond nursing and the health care needs of the immigrant population. Education, employment and recreation were addressed by Wald's various initiatives to reform community life. She was a pioneer in stressing the importance of play and the need for public playgrounds. A music school was added to the settlement's program along with classes in vocational guidance, home economics and prenatal care. The Neighborhood Playhouse on Grand Street was opened in 1915 with support from Alice and Irene Lewisohn.

As the age of reform progressed, Wald, along with Jane Addams and Florence Kelley shared a commitment to economic and social change. They worked to alleviate poverty, support children's welfare and expand the role of women in society. Kelley started the National Child Labor Committee in 1904 with the continuing support of Wald. This organization was responsible for legislation to ban child labor, and for the creation by president Theodore Roosevelt of the Federal Children's Bureau, under the direction of Julia Lathrop.

In 1914, Wald along with Kelley, Addams and others founded the American Union Against Militarism, the forerunning organization of the American Civil Liberties Union. As president of this organization, Wald met with president Woodrow Wilson and lobbied congress and advisors in the White House to allow neutral nations to end WWI through mediation. However, Wald was critical of confrontational tactics used by some suffrage and peace activists fearing that they would interfere with her work with the Henry Street nurses. She served as chairman of the Nurses Emergency Council during the influenza epidemic of 1918 and lectured widely on the history of nursing, and the importance of health care. Her memoir House on Henry Street was published in 1915, and a second volume, Windows on Henry Street was released in 1934.

Wald's health declined throughout the 1920s, but she still managed to travel to Russia on invitation of the Commissioner of Health in 1924. That same year she served as vice-president to Bellevue-Yorkville Health Demonstration and as the American delegate to the Women's International Conference on Peace and Freedom in Zurich, Switzerland. She was the first woman recipient of the Rotary Club's gold medal in honor of her life-long service as sociologist and organizer. Wald maintained a close relationship with three-time British prime minister and architect of the British Labour Party, James Ramsay Macdonald and his family. In 1928, she publicly supported the presidential campaign of Alfred E. Smith. Her involvement in daily affairs at Henry Street gradually decreased by 1933, when she retired to her house in Westport, Connecticut. While in retirement she continued to contribute to magazines The Survey, Forum and Atlantic Monthly. After a long illness, Lillian Wald died of a cerebral hemorrhage in 1940.

Scope and content note

The collection consists of correspondence, speeches, writings, and collateral papers documenting Wald's career in public health nursing and social work in New York City, her association with the Henry Street Settlement and the Visiting Nurse Service, and her many other social welfare concerns, such as child labor, housing, recreation, sanitation, peace, prohibition, and women's suffrage. The correspondence contains letters to and from Wald concerning the social conditions she encountered and sought to improve. Correspondents include friends, professional associates, government officials and well-known people in the U.S. and abroad. Other papers consist of speeches, articles and notes written by Wald; collateral materials which include articles and speeches by her colleagues in nursing and social work; letters she wrote during trips to the Orient in 1910 and to Russia in 1924; notes, minutes, reports, and printed matter from various conferences she attended; and miscellaneous biographical materials.

Series II. Correspondence, 1889-1940

The correspondence is arranged into two subseries: A. Letters By, B. Letters Received.

A. Letters by, 1889-1940

Letters by Wald are arranged chronologically. The letters are infrequent until the beginning of World War I. After 1918, a more systematic retention of her letters resulted in something approaching a complete record of daily correspondence. The beginnings of the Visiting Nurse Service appear in an item of July 2, 1893, the first of numerous reports by Wald and Mary Brewster, her companion, on the venture to New York's Lower East Side. The letters reflect Wald's lifelong concern for the social conditions first encountered in her nursing rounds. She sought to improve wretched housing, sanitation, and working conditions, and create new recreational and cultural facilities. She described her experiences and pleaded for help from personal and professional friends and through official government channels. Within this subseries are letters to many well known people in the United States and abroad.

There is an extensive correspondence with Ramsay MacDonald and his family, also with Margaret Bondfield. Presidents Wilson, and the two Roosevelt presidents received Wald's frequent pleas to support or veto various measures. Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, Governor Alfred E. Smith, Irene and Alice Lewisohn, Frances Perkins, George Alger, Henry and Rita Wallach Morgenthau, Josephine Goldmark, Helen Keller, Paul Kellogg, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lehman, Dr. Louis I. Dublin, Mr. and Mrs. Felix Warburg, Dr. Haven Emerson, Dr. Alice Solomon, and Sidney Hillman are but a few of the friends with whom Wald corresponded. There are also letters to Fannie Hurst, Zona Gale, Leo Arnstein, Eleanor Roosevelt, Arthur Hays Sulzberger, Ruth Draper, Mary Dreier and Helen Rogers Reid. Well known persons in social work include Jane Addams, Florence Kelley, Julia Lathrop, Grace Abbott, Homer Folks, Alice Hamilton and Katherine Lenroot. Among leaders in nursing represented are Lavinia Dock, Adelaide Nutting, Annie Goodrich, Isabel Stewart, Alma Haupt, Naomi Deutsch, Marguerite Wales, Lillian A. Hudson, Yssabella Waters and Katherine Tucker.

B. Letters received, 1896-1940

Letters received by Wald are arranged alphabetically by year and make up the bulk of the Correspondence Series. The letters received contain correspondence with the same individuals found in subseries A. The letters show Wald's efforts to alleviate wretched living and working conditions of the poor in New York City, as well as her efforts to remedy social ills on the city, state and national level. The files are evidence of Wald's ability to attract figures from various fields to support her achievements and the effective work of the Henry Street Settlement.

The correspondence details Wald's efforts to reform health conditions in New York City through various organizations, departments and commissions. Letters from Wald's benefactors Jacob H. Schiff, Irene and Alice Lewisohn, Felix and Paul Warburg, Herbert Lehman, and Henry Morgenthau are found throughout this series. Wald maintained on going correspondence with health care and social workers; Jane Addams, Lavinia Dock, Dr. Haven Emerson, Adelaide Nutting, Dr. Alice Solomon. Other supporters included lawyers Louis Marshall and Paul D. Cravath. There is extensive correspondence with British prime minister, Ramsay Macdonald and his family. Messages to Wald in support of and against Alfred E. Smith's 1928 presidential campaign are held in this series. Correspondence also shows Wald's ties with the Survey Associates, a philanthropic organization under the direction of Robert W. de Forest. Of special importance are the references to the plan suggested by Wald in 1909 to Dr. Lee Frankel of Metropolitan Life Insurance Company for the Visiting Nurse Service to provide care for its industrial insurance policy holders. Presidents Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, Franklin D. Roosevelt all composed letters in response to Wald's opinions on health and labor legislation.

Series III. Writings & Speeches, 1894-1939

The writings and speeches are arranged alphabetically by year and provide evidence of Wald's wide range of interests including education, industrial hygiene, infant mortality, labor reform, nursing, prohibition, sanitation, settlement work and unemployment. The series contains drafts and notes of lectures prepared by Wald for the first university program for the training of public health nurses established in 1910 at Teachers College of Columbia University. Organizations to which Wald presented speeches include the American Association for Labor Legislation, Children's Bureau, Consumers League, Crime Prevention Bureau, Foreign Policy Association and the National Confederation of Women's Clubs. The series also includes radio speeches and statements in honor of influential figures in the field of philanthropy and social reform.

Series IV. Collateral Material, 1907-1939

Contains important miscellaneous materials collected by Wald during her lifetime. The series includes articles and speeches by her friends in nursing and social work and other materials that may have been influential to Wald's own ideas and development. There are notes and reports from national conferences and committees of organizations in which she was an active member. Important documents include an assemblage of papers from the Women's International Congress at the Hague in 1915, Woodrow Wilson's Industrial Conference of 1919 and the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection in 1930. Other materials cover the League of Red Cross Societies Medical Conference at Cannes in April 1919 where Wald was sent as the Federal Children's Bureau delegate. The American League to Abolish Capital Punishment, National Committee for Mental Hygiene, National Federation of Settlements, National Organization for Public Health Nursing, New York Urban League, New York Welfare Council and the People's Mandate to End War are but a few of the associations with associated ephemera in this series.

Series V. Miscellany, 1908-1939

Includes extra documents on subjects related to Wald and the Henry Street Settlement. The guardianship files contain schoolwork, drawings, and correspondence regarding intellectual development of foster children in the care of Henry Street. Other records include ephemera from birthday celebrations at Henry Street, and real estate records dealing with Wald's house in Westport, CT often referred to as House-on-the-Pond. The medical records relate to Wald's illness in the final years of her life. Four volumes include a European travel diary, address book, daily reminder and Wald's personal copy of Matthew Arnold's Sweetness and Light. Two folders of additional correspondence were added to the collection in 1985 including letters to and from Eleanor Roosevelt, 1933 to 1939.
